

TRIBUTE TO BOULDER-DUSHANBE
SISTER CITIES

HON. MARK UDALL

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, December 8, 2005

Mr. UDALL of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the Boulder-Dushanbe Sister Cities organization and its ongoing work to develop friendship and understanding between the citizens of Boulder, Colorado, and the citizens of Dushanbe, Tajikistan.

In 1987, two cities on opposite sides of the world, in countries on opposite sides of the political spectrum, collaborated to bring their respective traditions, culture, and history to one another in a peaceful manner. During a time of great conflict and tension, the cities of Boulder, Colorado, and Dushanbe, Tajikistan, united as the Sister Cities. Over the next 3 years, dozens of Tajikistani painters, woodcarvers, and ceramicists worked on completing Dushanbe's gift to Boulder, the Boulder Dushanbe Teahouse. The result was a magnificent structure and a wonderful restaurant that offers exquisite cuisine and atmosphere.

Now it is our turn to give back to the people of Dushanbe. Planning is well underway for Boulder's reciprocal gift of a cybercafe, which will be part restaurant, learning center, and Internet connection point.

Most of all it will be our way of connecting to Tajikistan—by sharing our culture, helping Tajiks communicate with the outside world, providing educational resources, and investing in their community. At a time when international understanding between countries and their citizens is more valuable than ever, this project deserves strong support.

Mr. Chairman, I've attached a June 2005 newspaper article from The Daily Camera highlighting progress on the cybercafe project. I think it's important to call attention to this project and the volunteer efforts of the Boulder-Dushanbe Sister Cities organization. On its website, the group writes about the cybercafe that it "hopes that that gathering place, offering computer and Internet access rare in that part of the world, will bring to life the goal of helping people connect through what they have in common rather than what keeps them separate." I share that hope and commend the Boulder-Dushanbe Sister Cities organization for helping this project come to life.

RESIDENTS WORK TO REPAY DEBT: DUSHANBE CYBERCAFE PROJECT IS EXPECTED TO START IN FALL

(By Ryan Morgan)

Boulder owes the city of Dushanbe a cybercafe to reciprocate for a teahouse from the Tajikistani capital that opened in Boulder in 1998.

Now, after years of work, the Boulder residents organizing the cybercafe effort have received good news from Dushanbe officials: They expect to break ground on the project this fall.

Don Mock, a former Boulder city councilman and co-president of Boulder-Dushanbe Sister Cities, said his group learned late last week that city planners in Dushanbe had approved a new site for the cafe.

"It looks like some of the final hurdles have been cleared," he said.

Much of the delay came after Mock and other committee members realized that the site originally proposed for the cybercafe—one that would have placed it in downtown Dushanbe, next to a large concert hall and the national library—wouldn't work.

It turned out that city planners there wanted every building in that district to be at least five stories tall, far beyond the expected scale and cost of the planned cybercafe. So organizers had to find a new site and alter the building's design.

If all goes well, the cybercafe will sit in Dushanbe's Park of International Friendship, Mock said.

Mock said he thinks the cybercafe will give something of real value to residents of Dushanbe. It will offer books in Tajik and Russian and a "cultural center," he said.

"It's going to be more than a place to check e-mail."

With a final plan in place, the sister cities committee will now start redoubling its fundraising efforts.

"We want to be able to tell these big donors exactly what they'll be getting for their donation," Mock said.

The committee has raised about $400,000 and will need to raise an additional $300,000, he said.

Vern Seieroe, an architect helping to design the building, said he is relieved the process of navigating an often confusing bureaucracy located 7,000 miles away will finally yield dividends.

"You can only imagine the obscurity of what the process is, seeing it and attempting to understand it from this distance," Seieroe said. "We're learning a lot. Our learning curve is almost vertical."

Boulder's colorful Dushanbe Teahouse was also the culmination of several years' work and delays. Tajik craftsmen carved the intricate structure, disassembled it into 14 sections and shipped them to Boulder in 1990. The sections sat in storage for years. In 1998, they were re-assembled and the teahouse finally opened its doors.

THE REPUBLICAN RAID ON STUDENT AID

HON. BETTY MCCOLLUM

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, December 8, 2005

Ms. MCCOLLUM of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support and in solidarity with America's college students and our Nation's higher education institutions. Our competitiveness in the global economy is built on the foundation of a highly educated workforce. My Republican colleagues feel financial aid for higher education is a privilege, not a necessity for American students.

The Republican strategy to cut and gut Federal financial aid by over $14 billion hurts students, hurts families and threatens America's competitiveness. Harming higher education harms America.

The Republican raid on student aid makes the largest cut in the history of Federal student financial aid, while also increasing the deficit by $20 billion—adding more debt on the backs of hard working Americans and students.

Tim McDonald attends Hamline University in St. Paul, Minnesota. Tim spoke eloquently to me last week against these cuts. Tim said:

The generation that benefited from highly-subsidized, affordable higher education is now pulling the ladder up with them and forcing us to debt finance not only our own education, but their tax cuts. . .

I came to Congress to promote hope and opportunity. Vocational schools, technical schools and our colleges and universities provide America's scientists, engineers, entrepreneurs, teachers, nurses, law enforcement officials—our future leaders, with the skills, knowledge and opportunity to keep America strong and prosperous.

Republican priorities cut and gut the vital resources students depend upon to achieve their career goals and contribute to America. Instead of investing in students, instead of investing in America's future, this Republican scam forces students to pay the price for a mismanaged Republican budget.

I ask my Republican colleagues to stand with us and students to protect America's economic future, to not abandon the next generation of American leaders and to defeat the cutting and gutting of hope and opportunity for millions of American students.

HONORING ANTHONY RAFFA ON HIS CAMPAIGN TO BE ELECTED TO THE CHAUTAUQUA COUNTY
LEGISLATIVE DISTRICT 14

HON. BRIAN HIGGINS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, December 8, 2005

Mr. HIGGINS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Anthony Raffa, a resident of Chautauqua County for his quest to become the elected representative to the fourteenth legislative district in the Chautauqua County Legislature. Although Mr. Raffa was not able to realize his dream he has been able to make an impact on other's lives in a different way.

The campaign trail is a difficult path to take. Any person with a dream may enter but only a few are able to reach the end. Mr. Raffa traveled that path with his head held high and a smile on his face the entire way. I have no doubt that his kind demeanor left a lasting impression on the voters of district 14.

Mr. Raffa has tried his hand in county politics many times. That is a respectable trait to have. Determination to do good things for your county is one thing that Chautauqua County residents strive for. He was a long time legislator and a long time advocate for "good government."

Chautauqua County is blessed to have such strong candidates with a desire to make this county the wonderful place that we all know it can be. Mr. Raffa is one of those people and that is why, Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor him today.

TRIBUTE TO T.J. CONNOLLY

HON. HENRY CUELLAR

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, December 8, 2005

Mr. CUELLAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the seventh anniversary of Connolly and Company, a public relations, advertising and marketing firm in San Antonio which is located in the district I represent, the 28th district of Texas.

Mr. Speaker, in 1998, T.J. Connolly had a vision which he put into practice. He recognized a void in public relations that he thought he could fill with a company specializing in message management.

Connolly and Company was started with one telephone, two computers, a secretary and one client. Seven years later, it's a thriving public relations firm whose dynamic staff services clients in telecommunications, commercial real estate development, health care and law—among many others.

Connolly and Company is an upstanding business in Texas that helps its many clients put their best foot forward. The firm has collected many awards and is regarded as one of the top firms in San Antonio.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to have had this opportunity to celebrate the anniversary of Connolly and Company.

RECOGNIZING ANNIVERSARY OF THE RATIFICATION OF THE 13TH AMENDMENT

SPEECH OF

HON. SHEILA JACKSON LEE

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 7, 2005

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise here today to express my support for H.R. 196 that recognize the 140th anniversary of the thirteenth Amendment, which abolished slavery in the United States.

I applaud my colleague from Oakland, California, for her hard work on this resolution because of the efforts that have been made to ensure that the Thirteenth Amendment is respected in practice. There were many examples of seemingly deliberate attempts to bypass the 13th Amendment regarding slavery. For example, in Texas in 1867, African-Americans constituted about one third of the convicts in state penitentiaries. However, about 90 percent of those inmates were leased out for cheap railroad labor.

Apprenticeship laws also were embraced with increasing vigor throughout the South. In some States, such as Maryland and North Carolina, courts ordered African American children to be bound for labor to white "employers" without the permission or knowledge of the children's parents. Records compiled by the Freedmen's Bureau in those States indicate a virtual deluge of requests for assistance in obtaining the freedom of children enslaved through "lawful" State-court action. Of course, the State-court actions in these cases were inconsistent with Federal law, and the resulting involuntary servitude of these children was a violation of the Thirteenth Amendment. As founder and Co-Chair of the Congressional Children's Caucus, I assert that it is critical for the future of our children that we preserve the spirit of this Constitutional Amendment, for history has shown that children have been vulnerable in the past.

As members of Congress, we must ensure that this milestone in American history is recognized and celebrated. I am pleased to stand with my colleagues by being an original cosponsor of this legislation.

HONORING IRENE ALEXANDER

HON. RAHM EMANUEL

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, December 8, 2005

Mr. EMANUEL. Mr. Speaker, I rise to recognize one of Chicago's treasures, Mrs. Irene Alexander.

Today Mrs. Alexander will perform a concert of Chopin and Gershwin pieces for victims of Hurricane Katrina. Following that, she will visit Walter Reed Hospital to perform for wounded soldiers. Her final performance of the day will be for Navy veterans at a concert in Bethesda, Maryland. While this schedule would be too much strain for most, it is the norm for Mrs. Alexander, who is 85 years old.

When she is back home in Chicago, Mrs. Alexander shares her musical gifts at nursing homes throughout the city, performing approximately 150 concerts each year. An accomplished pianist, she has played at Chicago's Orchestra Hall and at venues in Israel and China.

Mrs. Alexander has overcome several personal hardships in order to serve others. As a child, she overcame polio, and as an adult she battled breast cancer. For the past 15 years, she has suffered from macro-degeneration of the eyes, and is legally blind today. Through it all she has continued to perform and serve as a source of inspiration for many.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to stand in recognition of Chicago's most generous and talented citizens, Mrs. Irene Alexander.

IN RECOGNITION AND REMEMBRANCE OF THE LIFE OF U.S. MARINE CORPS MASTER SERGEANT BRETT ANGUS

HON. BETTY MCCOLLUM

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, December 8, 2005

Ms. MCCOLLUM of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I thank you for the opportunity to recognize and honor the life of U.S. Marine Corps Master Sergeant Brett Evan Angus.

Minnesota and St. Paul have lost another courageous serviceman. U.S. Marine Corps Master Sergeant Brett E. Angus served his Nation, his community and his family with honor in one of the military's most dangerous jobs, as an ordnance disposal expert. Master Sergeant Angus was serving his second tour in Operation Iraqi Freedom when, on November 26, 2005, an improvised explosive device detonated while he was conducting combat operations near Camp Taqaddum, Iraq. He was assigned to Marine Wing Support Squadron-372, Marine Wing Support Group-37, 3rd Marine Aircraft Wing, I Marine Expeditionary Force, out of Camp Pendleton, California. During Operation Iraqi Freedom, his unit was attached to 2nd Marine Aircraft Wing, II Marine Expeditionary Force (Forward).

Master Sergeant Angus was born in St. Paul, Minnesota. His family history of military service dates back to the Civil War, and he followed his father, uncle and grandfather into military service. He was an outstanding professional soldier who loved being a Marine and earned several awards and medals for his service. He was eligible for retirement this year, but chose to return to Iraq for a second tour of duty. As an ordnance disposal expert, his family was constantly afraid of the danger his job put him in, but knew that his vital work was saving the lives of U.S. Armed Forces and the Iraqi people. His vast knowledge and expertise made him a valuable teacher for his fellow Marines.

I extend my condolences and share in the grief of his family and friends. Master Sergeant Angus' made the ultimate sacrifice while serving our Nation, and we will be forever grateful. The sympathies of all Americans go to his wife, Masami, his father, Russell, and to his family and friends.

Master Sergeant Brett Angus is the 26th service member from Minnesota to die in Iraq since 2003. I honor Brett Angus for his courageous service to this country, and his commitment to protecting our freedom.
